TRIPLE DAMAGE SUIT CONTINUES IN PHILA. COURT

Action Brought Against Mother in Court By Son

CORNWELLS HTS. FIRM

Claim is Made That Patents Are Being Infringed Upon

PHILADELPHIA, Apr. 21.—(INS)—The triple-damage suit brought under the Sherman anti-trust laws against a mother by her son continued in Federal Court in Philadelphia today after a New York lawyer assumed responsibility for the authorship of a series of letters threatening a Hathoro Company and its customers with infringement suits.

Max Chopnick, the attorney, called as the first witness in the suit of Kermit K. Fischer, of Doylestown, and George K. Porter, Hathoro, partners in the Fischer & Porter Co., of Hathoro, against the Schutte & Koerting Co., Philadelphia, controlled by Fischer's mother, acknowledged writing the letters, but stressed he was acting on behalf of the Deutsche Rotawerke Co., of Aachen, Germany.

The German company claimed to own patent rights on a "Rotameter," a device for measuring the flow of gasoline and oxygen, which is used extensively in airplanes, bombers, in hospitals and in many industrial plants.

The Schutte & Koerting Co. is the "exclusive" American licensee manufacturer under the German patent. A plant of the firm is located at Cornwells Heights.

After a row with his father in 1937, young Fischer quit the Schutte & Koerting Company, and went into business with Porter manufacturing "rotameters." His father died last November and since then his mother has been president of the company.

Fischer contends that the company controlled by his parents "scared" many of his customers into dropping business relations with him, as a result of letters charging he and Porter were "infringing" on the German patent and that both the company and its customers would be sued for infringement if they continued to make and sell the devices under the name of "Rotameters."

His suit, for triple damages, alleges that the methods used by his parents' company constituted "unfair competition."

Motorists Fail To Heed Ambulance Siren; Lad Hurt

Joseph Kellar, aged nine years, was painfully injured yesterday when he slipped in some mud and cut his side on a broken glass jug which was lying on the ground.

The boy was hurried to the Wagner hospital in the Citizens' Defense Association ambulance, of Newport, he being aided by Mrs. Walter Gillette and Mr. Brownback, the latter the captain of the Emergency Police of Newport area.

The boy suffered from shock and loss of blood, and those manning the ambulance state that driver of only one automobile gave the ambulance the right of way between Newport and Bristol, in spite of the fact that the ambulance siren was being sounded. "Our trip was hampered greatly," they state, in impressing importance of motorists heeding ambulance siren signals.

The boy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wilson. He is a student at Eddington public school.

Plaque Committee To Hear Reports Tonight

Reports of an interesting nature are expected to be made at the Sixth Ward Memorial Plaque meeting to be held in Karp's Hall at seven o'clock this evening.

William Mack, chairman of the plaque selection and purchasing committee, will describe in detail the plaque he and his committee members have selected.

Samuel Shire will outline to those named on the various sub-committees just what their duties are and how they should go about them during the next three weeks.

Although not official, it is understood that the organization has been offered a flag-pole as a gift, and this may be verified at the session this evening. Mr. Mack will also give the exact date of the ceremonies at this time.

Treasurer Wetherill requests all collectors who still have donations to make returns this evening so that he can make a statement as to just how much money has been collected thus far.

William J. Dougherty, general chairman, anticipates an even larger attendance than at the last meeting and asks all to be on hand promptly at seven o'clock.

BUCKS WOMEN VOTERS LEAGUE HAS ELECTION

Organization Has Session In Phila.; Present Number Of Subjects

ELECT MRS. C. B. GARY

Bucks County League of Women Voters had the novel experience of holding its annual spring convention outside of the county. Co-operating with the "save tires and gas" movement, the League met on April 14 at the Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia, the city League having offered headquarters for the day.

The county president, Mrs. C. A. G. Pease, Quakertown, was unable to be present. Vice-chairman Mrs. William R. Stueckert, Newtown, presided, with Mrs. Herman Kirkpatrick, Quakertown, as secretary.

Mrs. John A. Diemand, Buckingham, county director of government and economic welfare, touched on state-owned hospitals, the question of county or state administration of public assistance, interstate trade barriers.

HELD FOR SELLING BOOTLEG GAS

PHILADELPHIA, April 21.—(INS)—A 30-year-old Philadelphia gasoline station operator was being held under $3,000 bail today after admitting the sale of 20,000 gallons of bootleg gasoline at ten cents per gallon above the retail market price. Fred S. Frost told Federal officials he made $2,000 profit by selling the gas to customers who had no ration coupons. To cover the sales, he said, he purchased B and C coupons from four youths who only last Monday admitted stealing ration books representing 147,600 gallons. The youths are also under $3,000 bond each.

ASK HOLY DAY OBSERVANCE

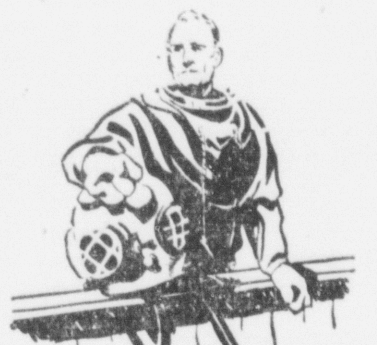

A request is made by the Daughters of the King of St. James' Episcopal Church for observance of Good Friday by closing of places of business in this locality for three hours on that day. The organization states: "It is hoped that as has been the custom for some time past, all merchants will close their places of business during the three hours, namely, 12 to three p. m., on Good Friday, and assemble in the churches of their choice for prayer and meditation."

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Naval Necessity

Thousands of diving outfits are essential to operation of our two-ocean navy, our coast guard and shore patrol. They are manufactured in two "styles," one for deep sea and another for shallow water diving. Divers are used for rescue work and for multifarious duties in connection with Navy operations.

The shallow water diving outfit for fifty feet of water, or less, costs $220. Deep sea outfits cost up to $2,500. Your War Bond purchases and your investment in other Government Securities helps give this needed equipment to the Navy and our fighting naval heroes. "They give their lives—You lend your money."

CROYDON RESIDENTS BUYING WAR BONDS

Over $3,000 Has Already Been Subscribed and More Is Expected

WOMEN AMONG BUYERS

"The second war loan drive report from Croydon shows a most patriotic spirit," workers in the drive reported today.

Mrs. Margaret Tryon, postmistress at Croydon, informs the committee that purchase of war bonds and stamps has increased steadily since the beginning of this drive.

Mrs. Wilson Smith, Croydon Manor, reported over $3,000 received through such sales, with some of her territory yet to be covered.

These bonds are mostly being bought by the housewives from their weekly budget, and children are buying stamps.

"We feel sure all the Croydon people know that it is this money that counts. Every dollar we lend the government will help win the war, and is the responsibility and duty of every one of us," say committee members.

EMERGENCY POLICE CHIEF MAKES PUBLIC RULES AND REGULATIONS NOW IN EFFECT TO GUIDE TRAFFIC DURING BLACKOUT AND TESTS

John S. Lynn, Chief of the Emergency Police of Bristol Borough, today made public the following information concerning rules and regulations to be observed during an air raid or an air raid test:

Lights on Road Vehicles and Other Conveyances. During the period and in the area of blackout (BLUE), but not during the period of air raid (RED):

(a) All moving motor vehicles are permitted to use headlights (on low or depressed beam) and normal tail lights and license plate lights.

(b) Street cars, elevated trains and subway trains operating above ground level are permitted to use normal exterior and interior lights.

(c) Road vehicles other than motor vehicles are permitted to use normal lights.

Vehicles Transporting Dangerous Materials. Vehicles transporting explosives, gasoline, or other dangerous combustibles shall, upon the mobilization and blackout (BLUE) signal, proceed forthwith, where possible, to a place more than one hundred (100) feet from the nearest habitation or business premises and there park as provided under movement of vehicles and other conveyances during air raid. Vehicles so proceeding may use headlights (low or depressed beam), normal tail lights, and license plate lights. After vehicles are parked and upon the sounding of the air raid (RED) signal, all lights shall be extinguished.

Movement of Vehicles and Other Conveyances. During period of air raid, practice or actual, from the time the air raid (RED) signal is given and until the mobilization and blackout (BLUE) signal is given thereafter only emergency vehicles shall be permitted to move. Only emergency vehicles, as defined below, may move during this period and during hours of darkness may use only headlights (on low or depressed beam) and normal tail lights and license plate lights.

(a) Emergency Vehicles. The term "Emergency Vehicles" shall mean the following road vehicles:

(1) Vehicles of, or acting under orders of, or traveling with the express permission of, the armed forces of the United States and her allies;

(2) Vehicles of fire departments and governmental police agencies;

(3) Ambulances and official rescue cars and other vehicles converted to such use in emergency service;

(4) Public utility repair vehicles operating in emergency service;

(5) Vehicles in emergency service identified by insignia prescribed by the director of civilian defense. In exceptional cases vehicles without such identifying insignia will be permitted to move as emergency vehicles provided the appropriate civilian defense authorities are satisfied that the use of such vehicles is necessary in the performance of emergency duties. (See State Council of Defense publication "War Highway Traffic Control in Pennsylvania" for further definition of vehicles described in this subparagraph.)

(b) During the period and in the area of air raid (RED) alarm:

(1) All road vehicles, except emergency vehicles and those otherwise provided for, shall be immediately stopped and parked so that roadway space shall be left for the passage of traffic, and all lights shall be extinguished. Occupants shall leave said

QUAKERTOWN MARINE IS OFFICIALLY COMMENDED

For Suppressed "Jap" Attempt To Take Henderson Field, Guadalcanal

QUAKERTOWN, Apr. 21.—A Quakertown man is one of four Marines officially commended by their superior officer for suppressing a Japanese attempt to take Henderson Field, on Guadalcanal, last October 24th.

He is Lt. Leonard R. Heller, 24, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Heller. His wife, the former Thelma M. Leister, and his year-old daughter, Linda Ferne, are living at Pennsburg.

The citation was made by Lt. Col. Lewis B. Puller, of the Marine Corps. Others included in the citation were Platoon Sgt. Robert D. Domokos and Pvt. Samuel Hirsch, Philadelphia, and Sgt. Gerald J. Golden, Olyphant.

Details of the action in which the incident occurred were not revealed by the military authorities.

DISCUSS REMOVAL OF S. LANGHORNE LIGHTS

Committee Named to Arrange for Purchase of Bonds of Second War Loan

PLAN FOR NEXT MEETING

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Apr. 21.—As isolated Business Men of South Langhorne will aid in the second war bond drive, by purchasing war bonds. A committee has been named to arrange for such purchase.

The suggested removal of traffic lights on the Lincoln Highway here was considered at the meeting last week over which John S. Lappan presided. A number of members stated that the traffic lights are of great aid, and in view of extensive use of the highway by the armed forces, and also due to so many intersecting streets, the lights are of absolute need.

At the May meeting Lewis Carroll and John Vogt will serve as members of the entertainment committee.

CASSILE-MARTIN

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Marjorie Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Martin, of Youngstown, O., to Roll R. Cassile, E. M. 1/c, of the U. S. Navy, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Cassile, of Croydon. The ceremony took place in a Baptist Church at Youngstown on April 15th.

NEW BOARD MEMBERS REPORT TO RED CROSS

Accounts of Work Show All Departments Have Been Very Busy

AT MONTHLY SESSION

The monthly meeting of the Bristol Branch, American Red Cross was held on Monday, at 129 Mill street, with a goodly number of board members present. Mrs. Russell DeLong, chairman, presided.

Minutes of the previous meeting were read by Mrs. Samuel Roberts, secretary.

New board members: Mrs. Elwood Goslin, chairman of volunteer services; Mrs. David Sheerer, Jr., canteen chairman; and Mrs. Walter Pitznika, home nursing chairman, were welcomed. Mrs. E. Lintor Martin, treasurer, then gave her report.

A discussion as to the proper use of arm bands was held and it was learned that arm bands must be returned to headquarters, and are to be worn in military places only by the military authorities.

A mutual understanding now exists between Red Cross and the USO. The former is a means of communication between the home and the soldiers; the USO serves members off duty and provides outside entertainment. It was of great satisfaction to hear from a Bristolian now in the service, he told

LATEST NEWS BULLETINS

RAF Attacks Berlin

London.—The Royal Air Force carried its "birthday greeting" offensive against Adolf Hitler's occupied Europe into a ninth consecutive day of onslaught today following a gigantic triple night attack on Berlin, Stettin and Rostock.

Large formations of bombers swept across the channel during the early afternoon in continuation of the non-stop attacks.

The raids on Berlin, Stettin and Rostock comprised one of the most active nights in the history of the RAF, and the heaviest blow yet carried out against Germany.

A probable force of more than 600 bombers were in operation over the Reich, it appeared, since the announced losses were 31 bombers.

Stettin, Baltic seaport shipbuilding center, was the most heavily hit. Details were not released immediately on the Mosquito bomber raid on Berlin, but in view of their known bomb-carrying power it was not expected that this assault would prove more effective than a nuisance raid. It appeared that this attack was made to remind Berliners that even on the occasion of Hitler's birthday the RAF still is able to reach the city.

British Eighth Army Occupies Enfidaville

Allied Headquarters in North Africa—Britain's powerful Eighth Army has occupied the Tunisian east coast town of Enfidaville in a final deadly showdown for complete mastery of North Africa, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, headquarters announced today.

Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery's artillery, infantry and tanks smashed their way into the Afrika Korps' 55-mile wide Enfidaville defense line and occupied all initial objectives in addition to Enfidaville itself.

Nazi Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's forces, desperately battling to stave off inevitable doom, fought back fiercely. Four bitter counter-attacks were loosed by the German forces but each in turn was repulsed by Montgomery's desert army.

The Allied air arm continued to hammer heavily at Axis landing fields and struck at enemy troop concentrations over the battle area. Destruction of 27 more Axis planes were revealed.

1ST LIEUT. DOWNING, SOUTH LANGHORNE, IS AWARDED MEDAL

Flier, Who Had Been Reported "Missing," Since Announced A Prisoner

ONE OF 24 HONORED

"For Heroism and Extraordinary Achievement During Attacks"

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Apr. 21.—A South Langhorne airman is one of 24 Pennsylvanians in the U. S. Army's Eighth Air Force, based in England, receiving decorations for "heroism and extraordinary achievement during attacks on German-held territory in Europe."

The localite so honored is 1st Lieut. Joseph A. Downing, Jr., son of Burgess and Mrs. Joseph A. Downing, of Durham Road. The announcement was made yesterday by the U. S. War Department that Downing is the recipient of the Air Medal.

Lt. Downing, together with Staff Sgt. Robert T. McKeage, and 1st Lt. Robert L. Kleyla, Philadelphia, were revealed some time ago as members of the crew of a Flying Fortress that participated in a raid on the German naval base at Wilhelmshaven, which raid took place on January 27th. McKeage received the Air Medal also; and Kleyla, who had previously been awarded the Oak Leaf Cluster for additional meritorious performances.

Lt. Downing, who had been reported missing in action following another raid over German-held territory on February 16th, had since that time been named among those announced

Patterson-Cook Wedding Takes Place In New York

At a ceremony in Emanuel Baptist Church, New York, N. Y., on Saturday afternoon at two o'clock, S. 2/C David Homer Patterson, of the U. S. Coast Guard, took as his bride, Miss Gladys Marie Cook, daughter of Mrs. Ella May Cook, 330 Cedar street. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Patterson, New York City. The Rev. Albert Couch, pastor of the church in which the double ring ceremony was performed, officiated.

Mrs. Claude Morris, New York, presided at the organ, and the vocalist, Mrs. Harry Hooper, New York, sang "I Love You Truly."

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Richard Cook, of Bristol. She was attired in a white satin gown made princess style, it having a train. The neckline was cut sweetheart style, and was trimmed with lace and pearls. Her finger-tip veil was scalloped, and the head-piece had trim of pearls and sequins. The arm bouquet consisted of white rosebuds and baby's breath. White slippers completed the ensemble.

Miss Mary Rose, of Bristol, was maid of honor. She was attired in pink taffeta, the gown having long torso effect ending in a French ruffle. The neckline was sweetheart style. The headpiece was fashioned of pink tulle veiling, these being entwined with lilies-of-the-valley. The veil was shoulder length. Miss Rose carried pink rose-buds. She wore a strand of pearls, the gift of the bride.

A reception took place at the home of the groom's parents, Mrs. Patterson was attired in a brown ensemble; and Mrs. Cook, mother of the bride, wore an ensemble of navy blue.

S. 2/C Patterson and bride are spending a week's honeymoon in New York City and Bristol. The bride's traveling costume included a blue dress, blue accessories, fur coat, and corsage of white roses and baby's breath. S. 2/C Patterson will return soon to his base in Florida, and the bride will reside for the present with her mother.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT
(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

"Misunderstood"

Washington, April 20. GRIEVED at being "misunderstood," there is a report that Mr. Elmer Davis, head of the OWI, may resign, returning to the radio and his activities as a member of the American Labor party, of New York. But, probably, this suggestion emanates from unfriendly sources and is wholly without foundation.

NEVERTHELESS, Mr. Davis does seem to be in an almost permanently agitated state of mind. It is easy to understand. On the one hand, the President, unwisely, declined to take his advice in the matter of the press coverage of the food conference. On the other, a continued skepticism is manifested by the press, in Congress and elsewhere, concerning the impartiality of the OWI organization and output. Also, there is his new wrangle with Mr. Jeffers, the rubber czar, who has grieved him greatly by terming one of his reports "stale, inaccurate and confusing." Consider this along with the internal friction which recently led to the resignation of some fifteen of his earnest young writers who departed exuding resentment and uttering the bitterest of recriminations—consider all this and the unhappiness of Mr. Davis seems natural enough.

STILL, IT IS to be hoped that he will not leave in a fit of discouragement. He is not, it is true, making a great success of his job. Though his friends emphasize his undoubted honesty and sincerity, they hurriedly pass over his unfortunate tendency to take himself with a depressing solemnity and his manifested defects as an administrator. As the soggy condition of the OWI clearly proves, he is not the best available man for his post. But neither is he the worst and the

CHEWING TOBACCO

A French writer has said that Americans have too much expression in their faces, that they make him think of an army which has thrown all its reserves into action. He also expressed the view that Americans have a strong urge to contemplate and meditate, and that their intense activity is nothing more than frantic flight from that desire.

As though corroborating the French writer's views, an article on plug tobacco appeared recently in the Wall Street Journal. "The No. 1 Smoking signs in factories have received the chewing tobacco business," the story said, continuing that "where fire hazards require a ban on smoking, men are turning from cigarettes, cigars and pipes to the older favorites in plug, twist, fine-cut chewing and scrap chewing tobacco."

Reflecting rising factory employment, chewing tobacco production increased nearly 10,000,000 pounds last year over the 1941 figure, and the increase over 1940 was nearly 17,000,000 pounds.

Every person who has observed a man engaged in chewing tobacco realizes that nothing contributes to contemplation more than a wad of plug or scrap. Gum addicts appear vacuous in comparison. For some deep and elusive reason, the chewing of chicle does not induce the light of the intellect to shine through the eyes, and continuous activity of the jaws robs the face of the meditative look. With tobacco all is different, including the rugs.

Well-conducted tobacco chewing is never a hasty process. The slow shifting of the wad in the mouth and the steady enjoyment of the fruits of the leisurely labor give a rhythm to the expression and a beam to the eye indicative of pleasurable contemplation. No tobacco chewer looks as if he were fleeing from the desire to meditate. He looks as if he were walking into it.

PEACE OFFENSIVE FIZZLES

A long-predicted Hitlerian peace offensive has been launched with Spain's offer, through her foreign minister, to make her good offices available for mediation between Germany and the Allied powers, and it has proved a dud.

Reaction in London and Washington was about what had been foreseen, and Moscow can be expected to follow the same line as her Allies—complete rejection of any peace which is not accompanied by unconditional surrender of the Axis powers.

Any offer from Fascist Spain—an ideological if not military ally of Hitler—must be suspect from the start, and the Spanish effort to bring the Pope into the game can be expected to fool no one. Although the Franco regime enjoys the blessings of the Holy See, the destruction of Hitler is regarded as a desirable goal in Vatican circles.

Now that the Hitler-Franco offer has been released and the Allies have completely ignored it, the United Nations can knuckle down to the real task of winning the war in the most complete and quickest manner possible, confident of the justness of their cause and of their power ultimately to prevail.

Certain federal officials become apoplectic when reference is made to their former predictions that a food shortage in this country would be utterly impossible.

vehicles as soon as parked and shall take shelter, except that occupants of road vehicles carrying property which must be guarded may remain in said parked vehicles.

EXCEPTION
During practice air raids, occupants of vehicles and other conveyances need not leave same and take shelter.

Designation of emergency vehicles shall be made by the State or Local Councils of Defense upon receipt of written application and approval thereof by the designated official of the state, county or local Council of Defense. These cards shall be carried by the operators or placed in the vehicles, when operated as emergency vehicles, and may, upon written application to the issuing council, be transferred to another vehicle.

There shall be one, and only one, official marking for identification of emergency vehicles. This shall be a white pennant with the civilian defense basic insignia superimposed thereon, approved and furnished by the State Council of Defense. This pennant shall be displayed upon a suitable staff affixed to the right front corner of the vehicle in such a manner as to place the top of the pennant just above the hood of the automobile at all times (day and night) when the vehicle is being operated as an emergency vehicle during periods of air raid or practice air raid. This requirement shall not apply to military vehicles, fire department equipment, police vehicles and ambulances when plainly marked as such.

chances are that the President's next selection—if he has to make one—would not be so good. In this particular war activity, the Presidential trend has been in the down direction. His first choice—Mr. Archibald MacLeish—was really high-grade. Most persons who know them both agree that Mr. Davis was a step down from Mr. MacLeish. Mr. Roosevelt's third choice—if it comes to that—is something not pleasant to contemplate.

TRUE, Mr. Davis seems now to be having a rather tough time at his press conferences, where there is a disposition to question rather than admire. But, probably, things will get easier. His critics may wear themselves out, and, anyhow, Mr. Davis hardly could leave until he has wrestled his appropriation for next year from Congress, where certain members are preparing to question him very closely about OWI personnel and performance. By these charges will be reiterated that the OWI output is strongly flavored with New Deal politics.

Death Goes Active by MAX LONG

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

There was a change I recognized in Komako. He put his foot on a chair, leaned forward and began in a conversational tone: "This evening Hasty and me speak to Mrs. Delmar. She is alive and okay. We walk five minutes up path and back while he goes into bedroom to blind up knee. We see Missus Josephine on lanai, fixing for leak in roof. Husband not there, or she not be doing that all alone. We see Miss Turva talking with Mary and going to take bath. But we don't see you—" he shouted suddenly, jabbing his big forefinger toward Budd. "Not you—" he pointed to Herb fiercely—"and not you!" The last indication was Thornton. "Yet all three you men are close to this house. So close you come running to take gun from Hasty. What you planted there for? To watch us while murderer goes in and kills Mrs. Delmar with Hasty's knife so you can blame Hasty?"

This was the old powerful Komako whom I had seen on so many occasions, and the men were not flowering uneasily at the big woman.

Budd was the first to recover. "We have a remarkable capacity for friendship," he said with biting sarcasm, looking from Komako to me. "But you can't protect Hoyt."

"See here," Thornton assumed a reasoning, patient tone. "The circumstantial evidence against Hoyt on the first murder, as we've pointed out, was plenty damning. That occurred before you arrived. Now he's been caught running out of Mrs. Delmar's all in a dither, and his knife is stuck in her back! Look, the safest thing you can do for all of us is to lock him up. If you still refuse, we'll send for the deputy sheriff, much as we hate having a mob down here. Any other officer of the law will throw him in jail instantly and no fooling."

"Sure, I can lock Hasty up," Komako said firmly. "In cabin on sampan. But for why? I know he not doing murders. I know who is. I have case 'bout ready for deputy sheriff—when I send for him."

I realized that was only a gallant bluff Komako was putting up in my defense, but it served to set them back on their heels for a moment. In the silence Komako settled himself in a big chair as if the interview were over.

Then Herb started to bluster agitatedly. "I'll stand guard on Hoyt, so I will!" If the Kanaka won't lock him up, I'll watch every move he makes! The rest of you can go to bed and feel safe."

Budd and Thornton were deep in a thoughtful inspection of the inscrutable Komako, wondering, no doubt, just what he had unearthed. Budd came out of it and said brusquely to Herb:

"All right, stand guard. Come along, Thornton."

Without a backward glance at us, they left, picking up their raincoats on the lanai as they went.

Komako said to Herb: "More better you stand guard out on path. You and them other fellows seem to like to walk in rain, looks like. Me and Hasty got cop work to do in here, so you watch from outside, please."

Herb's mouth dropped open in astonished resentment, but Komako waved him out with the butt of his old pistol. Herb went, grumbling and angry.

Komako looked at me and grinned, but nothing seemed funny to me after finding out that it was I who had been used as a fish knife. Mrs. Delmar and after Thornton's efficient summing up of the position I was in.

"Not to worry!" Komako commanded. "We going get evidence better than circumstances evidence like Thornton say against you. They all cover up for—" He checked himself and got up suddenly, going out to the edge of the lanai.

When he came back he explained: "I think maybe Herb is listening. But he is out there on path being guard, rain pouring off his hat, and he has big stick in hand." He drew his chair closer to mine and went on where he had left off. "You see how they all cover up for somebody? For Elaine, you think? But if it is Elaine, I not meaning what I say about them watching us so murderer can do work."

"No, Elaine ran out of her room obviously on a wild unpremeditated impulse. She was no more walking in her sleep than I am. But what were those three men skulking about for on a night like this?"

"That's what I say. . . Lots more criminals besides Polly Morgan in note book."

In my extremity I began hunting desperately about for something more tangible on which to hang our suspicions. "We could fit the Polly Morgan story either to Josephine or Turva. Josephine was a singer in a show. She could dye her hair—or more likely she was a synthetic blonde before. Turva—well, she's not pretty enough—but remember the sequin dress? And she was here this afternoon. She could have been looking for the play, and not finding it. . . Oh, what's the use! We know with our own eyes neither girl was here during those crucial five minutes—and Elaine was."

"If we only knew what story is in play," Komako said, then slapped the arm of his chair resoundingly. "We got only Elaine as sure thing to reckon on."

"More's the pity. I'd like to get those three men—"

I was interrupted by Herb's voice from the path, sharp, frightened. "Who's that?" And he stumbled into the lanai, brandishing the dried butt of a palm frond, but looking fearfully over his shoulder.

Komako seized the lamp and we rushed out to the lanai to protect Herb from whatever it was that had frightened him. Out of the soggy night came a bulky woman's figure swathed in an oiled silk rain cape, hood and all. She raked back the hood, which caught on curl papers to her annoyance, and the strong plain features of the doctor's mother emerged. She looked severely at Herb, but there was a hint of amusement about her mouth, too, as she said:

"What on earth were you afraid of me for? And why were you skulking about in the rain, for pity's sake? It'll be a wonder if that yell on let out won't have the whole face in an uproar again."

Herb looked sheepish, and for a moment was tongue-tied. I had seen on guard watching every move of Hoyt makes. But I know I'm catching cold in the rain, so I'll just stay here on the lanai."

"No, you won't," Mrs. Latham said vigorously. "I'm going to talk to these men alone. You can sit on our lanai, if you feel you have to stay on guard. From there you can see into the lighted living room of this house. But don't you make a sound that might wake Elaine. If you get scared again, don't bawl!"

"I wasn't scared," Herb muttered defensively, but he grasped his club and walked out into the downpour without further argument. We watched him cross the path and go into the Lathams' lanai.

Mrs. Latham then proceeded into the Delmar living room, Komako and I following. She put down on the table a pasteboard box she had been carrying under her cape and threw off the wet garment. Underneath she still wore the voluminous gray dressing gown we had seen her in earlier when she had sat down to read in her own living room.

"I can't abide that man," she complained half-humorously. "I try to be charitable—but he's so meddlesome! Who ever gave him any authority, anyway?"

"He try to boss," Komako said, smiling. "Just 'cause he is not on top of pile. Me, I know that kind. Sit here, please, Mrs. Latham."

He pulled forward a deep comfortable wicker chair and she sank into it and stooped to pull off her rubbers. Her whole aspect, everything she did and said, took me back to homely, pleasant scenes of my childhood—a steady influence in the weird unnatural atmosphere we were living in.

"How is Elaine, now?" Komako asked.

"Asleep. We can't tell till she wakes just what this terrible shock has done to her. My son told me you understand she's a victim of amnesia."

"Too bad she was there so close when Hasty find Mrs. Delmar dead," Komako's voice betrayed nothing but sympathy.

"My son says she was walking in her sleep again. But I know now that's possible," he answered me from the bedroom when I called, then my own seemed uneasy and went into the bedroom. She was gone, he hadn't been in bed yet—and he ran out after her. The next thing I knew he carried her in, unconscious, and told me the dreadful news about Mrs. Delmar. Now, I've come to headquarters to get this straight." She looked squarely at Komako.

"What you want to know?" Komako settled himself more comfortably and looked amicably back at her.

"Just how this murder happened. My son is too distraught over Elaine to be bothered. And when Mr. Budd and Herb and Thornton came in to get the doctor to come over here, I couldn't get anything from them—except that you, Mr. Hoyt, had murdered Mrs. Delmar."

"You believe that, too?" I asked quietly.

She didn't commit herself then, only demanding: "Tell me what happened, as nearly as you know it."

Between us, Komako and I retraced our steps from the time we had spoken to Mrs. Delmar to the time five minutes later, when I had found her stabbed to death. Both of us omitted mention of Elaine and the sheet of paper from the notebook, probably both actuated by the idea of telling her our suspicions of Elaine most carefully—if at all.

At the end of the recital Mrs. Latham studied me in silence. Then she said: "It doesn't make sense to claim, offhand, that you did it. What did you have against Bessie? I could see a possibility of your killing Delmar—angry, drunk, half out of your senses from a blow on the head. But you aren't in that condition now. You are a very mild person, Mr. Hoyt. Also you're too smart to use your own initiated knife. I am thoroughly inclined to believe your story."

and is prepared by writers deeply desirous of promoting the fourth-term "draft." Mr. Davis indignantly will deny again that there is the least trace of partisanship in the OWI and insist that it is absolutely free from politics.

SO FAR as he personally is concerned, Mr. Davis is entitled to belief, but his denials would carry more weight if it were not for the character of some of his appointments. The latest of these to come under fire is that of a Mr. Vernon C. Norton, just named to head the OWI in Rhode Island at $4,400 a year. The Providence Journal, protesting Mr. Norton's appointment, describes him as an ex-newspaper man, a close political ally of Mayor McCoy of Pawtucket and a former henchman of the late Walter E. O'Hara, the race-track boss who was indicted for violation of the Federal Corrupt Practices Act. Norton was the fellow who furnished bail for O'Hara and, the Journal says, is "up to his neck in politics." Apparently, the appointment was made to please New Deal Senator Theodore Green. That makes it even harder to reconcile with Mr. Davis' constant emphasis upon the nonpartisan nature of his organization.

HE HAS talked so much about his disinterested purity that a selection such as this, which obviously involves dealing with the politicians, leaves a pretty bad taste. Among other things, undoubtedly Mr. Davis will be asked to explain Mr. Norton to the Congressional committees. Also, he will be asked for further enlightenment concerning the 300 "psychological experts," whom it was stated, he is to send to Africa at the request of the army. Exactly what kind of a request the army made and what it wants with 300 "psychological experts" and where 300 of these would be found and what they would do are all matters upon which it would be good to have more light. While Mr. Davis is technically correct as to the request, there is reason to believe that the request was never approved and that the 300 experts will never be sent. Perhaps, Mr. Davis did not intend to convey the idea that they would be. For, certainly, he knows better than that. Or, perhaps, he just was misunderstood again.

Almighty and Eternal God, as we think on the events of Holy Week we are impressed with the failure of so many of the participants in the drama of the cross, and we are forced to draw the parallel between those lives and our own. Spare us, O Father, from the trifling characteristics of Herod, who trifled with life, with religion and with Christ. Spare us from the evasion which was Pilate's, who evaded his obligations, his opportunities, and the invitation of Christ. Fill our hearts with a devotion, O Father, which will render us incapable of making the mistakes which were made by these participants in the Passion of Christ. In His Name we pray. Amen.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

One of the most spectacular and lavish settings for the production of W. Somerset Maugham's famous novel, "The Moon and Sixpence," current attraction at the Grand Theatre, is the London town house wherein the hero and his wife are entertaining the upper crust of London society. More than one hundred persons, three-fourths of them ladies, gowned in the height of fashion, portray the guests at this swank affair.

They are being entertained by George Sanders, who portrays the role of Charles Strickland, the principal character of the Maugham book. This book tells Strickland's dramatic, color-packed life story.

BRISTOL THEATRE

The last word in super, deluxe gymnastics is one of the important settings for Hal Roach's latest comedy farce, "The McGuerins From Brooklyn," which is at the Bristol Theatre last times today. The picture brings back to the screen, along with William Bendix, Arline Judge, Marjorie Woodworth, Joe Sawyer and Grace Bradley.

RITZ THEATRE

There is a wealth of entertainment in "Rhythm Parade," the musical picture which opened an engagement at the Ritz Theatre last evening. The film is a constant succession of singing, dancing and instrumental numbers which make it the ultimate in tuneful spectacles.

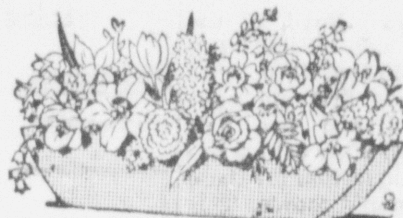

"Berlin Correspondent" is also showing.

In Iceland, the news told how troops had a good-natured fight to get the first Cokes available. Such are the stories from our fighting men everywhere.

To mean so much, a drink must have something—in taste, in goodness and in true refreshing qualities. Just to sip ice-cold Coca-Cola is to find all those things. Yes, all the difference between something really refreshing and just something to drink.

Maybe it's a make-shift dressing room, but Uncle Sam's soldiers have given it a homelike touch... fresh flowers and a frosty bottle of Coke. Who could ask for more?

Even with war and so many Coca-Cola bottling plants in enemy-occupied countries, our fighting men are delighted to find Coca-Cola being bottled in so many places all over the globe.

MACK SAYS HE COULD GET ALONG ON SIX OR 7 GOOD PITCHERS

Veteran Leader Says His Catching Staff Is Satisfactory

A'S HAVE LOST 25 MEN Even With the Losses the A's Have A Well-Rationed Camp

(Editor's Note—Herewith is the first article of a series on prospects of the various major league clubs in the forthcoming pennant races. Today, the Philadelphia Athletics.)

WILMINGTON, Del., Apr. 21—(INS)—Connie Mack, who was born during one war, helped baseball through two others and feels sure the game will survive the current international untidiness, has more good players on his club roster than at any other time in the last 10 years.

But the names of most of them appear on the flyleaf captioned: "Athletics' Roll of Honor."

Phil Marchildon, 17-game winner last year; the sharp young pitchers, Dick Fowler and Porter Vaughn; slugging Sam Chapman; Jack Wallaesa and Al Brancato, promising shortstops; a rattling infield rookie, Don Richmond; Benny McCoy, Eddie Collins, Jr., Crash Davis, Jack Knott—all told, the A's have lost 25 men to the armed forces or war work, a figure unmatched by any other team.

Even so, this is a well populated camp for these times of rationed manpower, counting regulars and recruits, sand-lotters and prospects still attached to the Wilmington farm, the 80-year-old manager has the tidy total of 26 players, or reasonable facsimiles thereof, in confinement here.

Some of the camp inmates are big, fast and rugged-looking. All are being hopped up with vitamin pills, on the theory that what's good enough for the world champion Cardinals can't hurt the A's.

But neither their numbers nor their drugstore vitality can disguise the fact that very few of them have major league pretensions.

This is especially true of the pitching staff, which includes only three members of last year's corps—knuckleballers Luman Harris and Roger Wolf and young Russ Christopher. Among them, this trio accounted for 27 victories last season.

Jesse Flores, up from Los Angeles on a no-like no-pay trial, is the only one of the rest who has had double-A experience.

"I could get along with six or seven pitchers if I could depend on them," Connie said. "But . . ."

The catching staff is satisfactory with Hal Wagner, Bob Swift and 38-year-old Coach Earle Brucker, reclaimed as a slightly active player this year. The infield shapes up thus:

First base, Dick Siebert, proficient but brittle; second, Pete Suder, slow but moderately competent; shortstop, Irvin Hall, whose .299 batting average was second in the Class A Eastern League last summer; third base, Eddie Mayo, draftee from Los Angeles who failed with the Giants and Braves. Frank Skaff, a Villanova College alumnus with three years' minor league training, is eligible for utility work. Estalella, listed as an outfielder, can play third base.

Elmer Valo alone remains of last year's outfield. Jo-Jo White, the Detroit veteran, is up from Seattle, and Johnny Walaj, formerly of Washington, was bought from Buffalo. Big Felix Mackiewicz, Purdue's end coach, is getting his third trial.

All are wellbred and perfect gentlemen. Their chances of getting out of eighth place are as thin as their employer's venerated shanks.

DISCUSSING PLANS FOR BASEBALL LEAGUE

Formation of the Bristol Twilight Baseball League is progressing. Managers of the various teams held another meeting last night and reported that if enough players can be secured a league will be formed.

Edgely A. C., winners of last season, was represented by Eddie DeKoyler. DeKoyler is doubtful whether the Edgelyites will be able to field a team but promised the officials to have a full report at the next meeting. Several prospective teams will be contacted in the meantime and it will be known definitely next week whether or not the league can be formed.

LANGHORNE WINS OVER BENSLEM NINE

LANGHORNE, Apr. 21—In the opening game of the Lower Bucks County High School League, the Langhorne baseball nine nosed out Benslem, 3-2, in an eleven inning game. Due to an error, it was previously announced

SPORTS ODDITIES

By Joe Cronin
As Told to Sid Mercer
(I. N. S. Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Apr. 21—(INS)—A most unusual play that stands out in my memory happened at Fenway Park, Boston, in a game between the Red Sox and Cleveland clubs a few years ago. Cleveland was leading, 5 to 3, when we came to bat in the last half of the ninth. Monte Pearson was pitching for Cleveland and I was at bat.

We had runners on first and second bases with one out when I hit the first ball Pearson pitched and lined it straight at Sammy Tale, Cleveland third baseman. The ball broke through Hale's hand, struck him on the forehead and caromed off into the hands of Billy Knickerbocker, the Cleveland shortstop.

Knickerbocker tossed to Roy Hughes, second baseman, who touched the base to put out the man caught off that bag. Hughes then relayed to Hal Trosky, first baseman, to complete a triple play that ended the game.

(Steve O'Neill, new manager of the Detroit Tigers, also sent in this play. O'Neill was the Cleveland manager. His account differs from Cronin's in only one inconsequential detail. He had Cleveland leading by only one run.)

Cronin and Lake Sewell, now manager of the St. Louis Browns, also sent in the freak play described in this series by Clark Griffith; the one in which Lou Gehrig and Dixie Walker were tagged by Sewell for a double play at the plate.

Sewell amplified Griffith's description of the climax: "I knew it was going to be close so I decoyed Gehrig. He fell for it and came in standing up. The ball beat him by an eye-lash. I caught it just in front of him and he spun me completely around when he hit me. Walker was right on me but sliding so all I had to do was to drop down and tag him."

that Langhorne was to play Bristol but this game will be played at a later date.

The game was a hurling match between the speed-ball pitcher, Kenny Clark for Langhorne, and Hughie Deans, Benslem. Both hurlers allowed four hits. Clark won his own game in the eleventh when he singled, stole second, advanced to third on a passed ball, and crossed the plate with two out when the Benslem pitcher allowed a thrown ball to get past him.

The Langhorne team is being coached by the principal of the school, William A. Thomas. Benslem's coach is Danny Charles.

Marionette Show Given Before Grade Students

"Robin Hood and His Merry Band" was the title of a marionette show presented in Bristol high school auditorium yesterday afternoon for benefit and enjoyment of pupils of grades one to seven, inclusive, of Bristol public schools.

The program was sponsored by the Fathers' Association of Bristol public schools in a desire to present a beneficial program for all students of the local system. A program will be given next month for junior and senior high school students.

The marionette show yesterday was by the Sarge Kingsland Performers, who are making a coast-to-coast tour. The settings were most elaborate, and as many as nine marionettes were on the stage at one time. King Arthur was mounted upon a horse, and novelties such as a dog and a bear gave fine performances.

Later, in presenting "Varieties," circus scenes and dances, including a skeleton dance, were shown.

The junior-senior high school program on May 11th will feature Harry C. White, "The Electrical Wizard." The Fathers' Association is the sponsor of this program also.

Film, "Know Your Money," Shown To Benslem Club

ANDALUSIA, Apr. 21—A motion picture "Know Your Money," which film was obtained through the Secret Service office in Philadelphia, was presented before members of Benslem Rotary Club last evening.

The Secret Service officials have been showing this and similar films during a program of education as to how to recognize counterfeit money. This educational program is being amplified particularly at present in view of the possibility of the enemy preparing, if the opportunity presents itself, to use such money in this country.

After the full-length film was shown, booklets were distributed to Rotarians, these being on the same subject and provided by the U. S. Treasury Department.

Two guests were present, namely Reese B. Davis, of Fort Worth, Texas, and Harry G. Mann, of Philadelphia, the two passing through this area at the time of the Benslem Club's session.

and margarine restrictions. She said she had no sympathy with starry eyed or cynical groups which think "enterprisers" should have no reward and thrift no privilege." She felt every government proposal should be weighed to see its effect on the liberty of the individual.

Mrs. Bertram De Young, New Hope, who has headed the legislative work for the County League, reviewed many measures "considered by the present legislature which tend to break down gains made in the past, such as attack on the parole set up and on the advances accomplished by the Goodrich plans, as well as blocking of needed reapportionment and the adopting of filibuster methods." She urged women to prepare themselves and to help prepare others to enter active political offices.

Mrs. Hugh B. Eastburn, Bristol, who leads the League's work in government and foreign policy, discussed trade agreements, the Humber resolution, the Senate "Hall Burton, Hatch-Hill resolution" and the Streit plan of Federal Union. She stressed the merit of a union with its popular vote for decision over a League with its vote by government.

Mrs. Jessie Dofferer, Quakertown, discussed her department in the County League, namely education and government. She championed the new system of social studies for all grades, discarding the old text book idea of learning from first page to the last. She would use text books to throw light on problems of today, developing ever understandings and appreciations in pupils' attitudes toward other races and nations.

Mrs. William W. Fabian, Newtown, read the report of the county treasurer, Mrs. Samuel S. Gray. Mrs. Fabian also gave the findings of the auditors.

Mrs. LeRoy Nixon, Mrs. Charles Orr, Mrs. Bernard Osterlenk, Mrs. Carlton Leedom and Mrs. Lawrence Braymer, who had served on the nominating committee, gave their report through the chairman, Mrs. Nixon. Nominations were as follows: President, Mrs. Charles B. Gary, New Hope; 1st vice-president, Mrs. Hugh B. Eastburn, Bristol; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. William R. Stuckert, Newtown; 3rd vice-president, Mrs. Thomas Ross, Doylestown; secretary, Mrs. Lawrence Braymer, Lahaska; treasurer, Mrs. William W. Fabian, Newtown; Directors—Mrs. Horace A. Effrig, Newtown; Mrs. Francis M. Garver, Ivyland; Mrs. Clarence Strunk, Mrs. Jacob Shoemaker, Quakertown; Mrs. John F. Follinsbee, New Hope.

The nominating committee followed the League's policy of keeping the offices evenly divided between the two major parties, five being enrolled in one party, five in the other, and one non-partisan. An election of the proposed candidates made them the League's officers for the next two years.

An interesting resume of the past biennium's work was sent in by Mrs. Peas in which she told of many devices resorted to in carrying on the organization's business with the least possible use of automobiles.

Her successor, Mrs. Charles B. Gary, in the final remarks of the day felt that at a time when so many men are out of the country women have an especially heavy responsibility, and a chance to show what they know and to articulate what they desire. "The League should work for the end that every member will be a live force for good government herself. In such a manner the League could bring a genuine contribution for our own day and for the world of tomorrow."
